

D. Dating Violence Victimization

Dating violence was measured with 6 items from the Partner Victimization Scale (Hamby, 2014) and the Women’s Experience with Battering Scale (Smith, Earp, & DeVellis, 1995). These items assessed both physical and psychological dating violence experienced by participants. Participants were asked questions about incidents involving any “hook-up, boyfriend, girlfriend, husband, or wife, including exes” since enrolling at their school. Participants rated the frequency with which each item had occurred as never, once or twice, sometimes, often, or many times. An affirmative response to one or more items indicated dating violence victimization.

Overall, 160 participants (17.3%) experienced at least one incident of dating violence. Many participants reported multiple incidents of dating violence, with an average of 2.8 incidents reported by those participant indicating they had been victimized. Females were most likely to report dating violence, with one in five females who took the climate survey reporting at least one incident of dating violence.

Follow Up: Dating Violence Victimization

All participants who reported at least item of dating violence victimization were directed to follow up questions related to the participant’s identification of one incident of dating violence victimization that had the greatest impact on their life. The majority of participants reported that the perpetrator was male (83.8%), and identified them as their current romantic partner (45.0%) or former romantic partner (43.1%). Most participants who reported DV victimization were female (67.8%) and between the ages of 18-25 years old (63.8%).

Dating Violence Victimization at Nashua Community College
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Victimization rates for dating violence were slightly lower at NCC than CSAPP_{NH} schools overall. At NCC, 28 out of 168 student participants (16.7%) reported at least one incident of dating violence victimization. The majority of the participants who reported victimization were female. • When asked follow up questions about the dating violence incident, the majority of NCC participants reported the perpetrator was their current romantic partner or former romantic partner. In the majority of the reported incidents, the perpetrator was male.

E. Sexual Violence Victimization

The ARC3 measured sexual violence victimization using the Sexual Experiences Survey Short Form Victimization (SES-SFV) (Koss et al., 2007). The SES-SFV has 25 questions measuring five types of sexual violence victimization. For each question students indicated the frequency (0 times, 1 time, 2 times, or 3+ times) with which someone used coercion, force or incapacitation against them since they enrolled at their school. The SES-SFV is scored to identify the frequency of the following five types of sexual violence victimization:

- Unwanted sexual contact – fondling, kissing, or rubbing up against a person’s private areas of their body, or removing clothing without the person’s consent (but did not involve attempted sexual penetration) using coercive tactics, incapacitation, or force.
- Attempted coercion – attempted oral, anal, or vaginal sex without a person’s consent using coercive tactics.
- Coercion – oral, vaginal, or anal sex by coercive tactics.
- Attempted rape – attempted oral, anal, or vaginal sex without a person’s consent by incapacitation or force.
- Rape – completed oral, anal, or vaginal sex without a person’s consent by incapacitation or force.

In Table 8 we present the participant reported rates for each category of sexual violence victimization by gender. Overall, ninety-five participants (10.5% of survey participants) reported at least one incident of sexual violence victimization since enrolling at their school. These 95 student participants reported a total of 463 incidents of sexual violence, for an average of 4.9 incidents per student participant reporting any victimization.

Follow Up: Sexual Violence Victimization

All participants who reported at least item of sexual violence victimization were directed to follow up questions related to the participant’s identification of one incident of sexual violence victimization that had the greatest impact on their life. The majority of participants reported that the perpetrator was male (77.9%) and was their current or former romantic partner (35.8%). Most participants who reported SV victimization were female (77.9%) and between the ages of 18-25 years old (69.5%).

Sexual Violence Victimization at Nashua Community College
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • At NCC, 27 out of 168 survey participants (16.1%) reported at least one incident of sexual violence victimization, a higher rate than overall CSAPPNH participants. The majority of the 27 participants who reported victimization were female. • When asked follow up questions about the sexual violence incident, the majority of NCC participants reported the perpetrator in this incident was their current romantic partner or former romantic partner. In the majority of reported cases, the perpetrator was male.

Use of Findings and Next Steps

The results of the CSAPP_{NH} climate survey should be interpreted in the context of its limitations. First, due to the low response rate, we cannot say that the survey results are representative of and generalizable to the entire student body of CSAPP_{NH} schools. Second, despite the fact that the ARC3 Climate Survey uses well-established and validated instruments to measure sexual misconduct, there are always limitations to self-report measures.

The high rates of sexual misconduct reported by our survey respondents are obviously cause for concern. Faculty, staff, administrators and students at CSAPP_{NH} schools must work together to prevent sexual misconduct on our college campuses. The negative impacts of sexual misconduct victimization are multifarious, as sexual misconduct hurts mental and physical health, educational achievement, and the personal finances of victims, as well as the whole campus community (Black et al, 2011; Schafran, 1996; Brener et al, 1999; MacMillan & Hagan, 2004; Peterson, 2017). Understanding that sexual misconduct is a real problem at CSAPP_{NH} schools is the first step towards change.

The report findings illustrate the importance of providing sexual misconduct education and prevention training to Nashua Community College students. The results will inform the direction of CSAPP_{NH} and provides guidance for CSAPP_{NH} college partners and PIRC in the areas of:

1. Providing education regarding sexual misconduct, sexual assault and intimate partner violence to students and information on reporting an incident
2. Enhancing support for unique student populations, including LGBTQ students, minority students, students with families, and online students
3. Increasing students' exposure to sexual misconduct resources, and education regarding prosocial bystander intervention

Next Steps:

Over the course of the year, PIRC will work with Nashua Community College and other CSAPP_{NH} partner schools on ways to use climate survey information to inform institution policies and programming. We are excited to help develop task forces at all eight schools starting in Fall Semester 2017, with the goal of working together to educate students, support survivors, and prevent sexual misconduct from happening.

We welcome any questions or comments regarding this report, or the climate survey in general. Please contact Sharyn Potter (Sharyn.Potter@unh.edu) or Rebecca Howard (Rebecca.Howard@unh.edu) with your feedback.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE VICTIMIZATION

A. Sexual Victimization Prevalence

Instructions: The following questions concern sexual experiences that you may have had that were unwanted. We know that these are personal questions, so we did not ask your name or other identifying information.

Your information is completely confidential. We hope that this helps you to feel comfortable answering each question honestly. Fill the bubble showing the number of times each experience has happened to you. If several experiences occurred on the same occasion—for example, if one night you told some lies and had sex with someone who was drunk, you should indicate both. We want to know about your experiences since you enrolled at [INSTITUTION]. These experiences could occur on or off campus, when school is in session or when you are on a break.
